Harriet Tubman Underground Railroad State Park & Visitor Center

Enjoy live music, programs by Team Tubman and self-guided activities as we honor the life and legacy of Harriet Tubman during the Year of the Woman. The event is free of charge and all programs are family-friendly.

Music and Ranger-led Programs

African-American Spirituals at 10 a.m. in the Pavilion, weather permitting. If it's cold or raining, the program will occur in the Multi-Purpose Room.

Learn about Spirituals in African-American History as National Park Service Superintendent Deanna Mitchell presents on the legacy of spirituals in the United States.

A Musical Journey with Diana Wagner at 11 a.m. in the Multi-Purpose Room

Diana Wagner is a sought-after Eastern Shore multi-instrumentalist who specializes in historic and traditional folk and blues music. When Diana is not playing instruments, she is Associate Professor of Education at Salisbury University and serves as a Volunteer Ranger for the Maryland Park Service.

Reading Ranger at 12 p.m. in the Research Library

Meet Ranger Nwakudo in the research library and enjoy stories of Minty's youth and time on the Underground Railroad.

Songs of Freedom at 1 p.m. in the Multi-Purpose Room

Celebrate freedom through music with Ranger Crenshaw and learn about the songs featured in the Visitor Center and the movie Harriet. Participation is encouraged, bring your voice and a smile!

Mancala! Mancala! Mancala! at 2 p.m. in the Research Library

Join Ranger Crenshaw and learn how to play the board game Mancala! It takes a minute to learn and a lifetime to master. Bring a smile and creativity and create your own game board.

Important Women in Harriet Tubman's Life at 3 p.m. in the Multi-Purpose Room

Learn about women who were important to Ms. Tubman with Ranger Maszkiewicz including Rit Green Ross (mother), Susan B. Anthony (fellow suffragette) and Sarah Bradford (first biographer).
